1. INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

1.1 Project Background

The National Radioactive Waste Disposal Institute (NRWDI) is mandated by the government of South Africa, through the NRWDI Act No.53 of 2008, to manage the disposal of radioactive waste on a national basis, including developing plans for long-term management of waste storage and disposal as well as establishing (i.e., planning, siting, designing, licensing, constructing and operating) storage and disposal facilities as may be required. One of such facilities is the Centralised Interim Storage Facility (CISF) for the long-term storage of spent nuclear fuel from the country's nuclear reactors. The facility is required at this stage of nuclear operations in the country as there is growing shortage of spent fuel storage capacity on the reactor sites. As a result, a CISF project has been initiated to address this and other long-term spent fuel management issues.

In 2017, the Minister in the Department of Mineral Resources and Energy (DMRE) established a CISF Project Steering Committee to provide oversight and advice on the project. Following the Ministerial authorisation in 2019, the Steering Committee tasked NRWDI with conducting the project in accordance with the guidelines of the Framework for Infrastructure Delivery and Procurement Management (FIDPM). The FIDPM specifies that a project is performed in 7 stages: (1) Prefeasibility, (2) Feasibility, (3) Design Development, (4) Design Documentation, (5) Works, (6) Handover and (7) Closeout. From the second (feasibility) stage, a gateway review is performed at the end of each stage for the approval of the associated stage deliverable.

1.2 Project Description

The CISF project is developed to address the anticipated shortfall in spent fuel storage capacity at the country's nuclear reactor sites and to provide for storage until the future destination is available.

The CISF is envisaged to be established on the site of the Vaalputs national radioactive waste disposal facility in the Northern Cape. It will be designed, licensed, constructed and operated in accordance with the National Nuclear Regulator's (NNR) site-specific licensing provisions. The development of the CISF will include three phases: a pre-license application phase, a license application review phase, and an initial construction/pre-operations phase.

The purpose of the CISF is to provide safe and secure storage of spent fuel from the country's nuclear reactors with the aid of storage technologies (cask systems). The facility will be designed with a design life of 100 years to meet the following main requirements:

- To provide necessary free capacities for removal and storage of the spent fuel assemblies from nuclear reactors during operation and decommissioning;
- To ensure long-term storage of spent fuel for a period not less than 70 years.

1.3 Project Scope

The scope of work for the CISF project includes siting, design, licensing and construction and related activities. All these activities are executed in accordance with the FIDPM project framework and seven stages, which are prefeasibility, feasibility, design development, design documentation, works, handover and closeout. The scope further covers a contractual strategy for the procurement of spent fuel storage equipment and other storage facility subsystems (including storage pad/building, fencing, security and monitoring systems, etc.).

The project scope excludes the following:

operation of the CISF and related requirements, plans and activities;

- development of transport infrastructure outside the CISF premises, as this is the responsibility of government and/or the spent fuel generators;
- manufacture, supply, procurement and/or licensing of transport and storage casks, as this is the responsibility of the spent fuel generators.

2. PROBLEM STATEMENT

After completing a feasibility study, NRWDI must now proceed to the Design Development stage of the CISF project and develop a Preliminary Design of the CISF. The principal purpose of the Preliminary Design is to specify the structural framework of physical components which will implement the CISF system at the Vaalputs national radioactive waste disposal facility site.

Preliminary Design refers to that part of the Development Phase where all of the geometric design elements, including a preliminary estimate of the preferred design solution are documented for input to the Detailed Design Stage. The Preliminary Design often bridges a gap between design conception (established in the Feasibility Stage) and Detailed Design, particularly in cases where the level of conceptualisation achieved during ideation is not sufficient for full evaluation. During the Preliminary Design stage, major emphasis is put upon civil, mechanical, and architectural design. The design of all the mechanical processes will also be completed at this stage to ensure that they are integrated properly into the structures. Architectural concepts will be developed, and structural systems identified. So in this task, the overall CISF system configuration will be defined, and schematics, diagrams and layouts of the project will be developed to contribute to the project configuration.

3. SCOPE OF WORK

3.1.1 Service Provider Activities

The service provider is expected to

- Develop and describe a CISF design concept and system configuration.
- Provide a design that meets safety requirements.
- Provide an analysis of the CISF design concept.

- Develop a flowchart (or other schematic) of each system of the CISF.
- Define clearly each system's, subsystem's and component's requirements.
- Provide a high-level outline of design features that meet each of these requirements.
- Produce a preliminary design document consisting of the above elements, all of the geometric design elements, and sketches/figures.

3.1.2 Employer Activities

The employer is expected to:

- 1 Conclude a contract with a service provider, manage the contract from start to end and ensure that the terms and conditions of the contract are met.
- 2 Review and monitor the contractual deliverables due to the service provider.

- 2 Section 4 (1) (b) (iii) of the Competition Act No. 89 of 1998, as amended, prohibits an agreement between, or concerted practice by, firms, or a decision by an association of firms, if it is between parties in a horizontal relationship and if it involves collusive bidding (or bid rigging).² Collusive bidding is a pe se prohibition meaning that it cannot be justified under any grounds.
- 3 Treasury Regulation 16A9 prescribes that accounting officers and accounting authorities must take all reasonable steps to prevent abuse of the supply chain management system and authorizes accounting officers and accounting authorities to:

Bid rigging is, therefore, an agreement between competitors not to compete.
